QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the issues presented in the petitions, pertaining to the propriety of preliminary injunctive relief, are now moot in light of the supervening grant of a permanent injunction.

2. Whether section 105(a)(1) of the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978, which bars the states from imposing any regulation "relating to rates, routes, or services of any air carrier," preempts state regulation of air fare advertising.

3. Whether an effort by persons to intervene and secure relief in litigation before a district court constitutes sufficient contact with the forum to subject those persons to jurisdiction for purposes of that litigation.*

* The respondents are Trans World Airlines, Inc.; Continental Airlines, Inc.; British Airways PLC; Pan American World Airways, Inc.; Air Canada; Compagnie Nationale Air France; Alitalia-Linee Aeree Italiane, S.p.A.; El Al Israel Airlines Ltd.; Finnair; Lufthansa German Airlines; Japan Air Lines Company, Ltd.; Qantas Airways Ltd.; Scandinavian Airlines System; and Viaçao Aérea Rio-Grandense (VARIG). Their corporate parents and partially owned subsidiaries are listed in Apps. A-N, infra.

BRIEF IN OPPOSITION

This brief in opposition is filed on behalf of all respondents.

STATEMENT

1. The federal regulatory scheme. Civil aviation has been subject to extensive federal regulation since enactment of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, ch. 601, 52 Stat. 973 (1938). Included among the powers conferred upon the Civil Aeronautics Board ("CAB") by that Act was the authority, now codified in section 411(a) of the Federal Aviation Act, 49 U.S.C. app. § 1381(a), to determine whether an air carrier "has been or is engaged in unfair or deceptive practices or unfair methods of competition." For many years that authority over consumer protection was shared with the states. See Nader v. Allegheny Airlines, 426 U.S. 290 (1976). But subsequent enactment of the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978, Pub. L. No. 95-504, 92 Stat. 1705 (1978), represented "a major change and fundamental redirection as to the manner of regulation of interstate and overseas air transportation." S. Rep. No. 631, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 52 (1978). See also H.R. Conf. Rep. 1779, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 56 (1978) ("this new, comprehensive legislation . . . entirely overhauls the aviation regulatory system").

The purpose of the Deregulation Act was to encourage development of a system of civil aviation that "relies on competitive market forces to determine the quality, variety, and price of air services" S. Rep. No. 631 at 1; see also 49 U.S.C. app. § 1302(a) (9). Section 102 (a) (1) of the Act, 49 U.S.C. app. § 1302(a) (7), instructs the CAB to prevent "unfair, deceptive, predatory, or anticompetitive practices . . . that would tend to allow one or more air carriers . . . unreasonably to increase prices, reduce services or exclude competition in air transportation." In turn, section 105(a) (1) of the Act expressly preempts state law: "no State . . . shall enact or enforce any law, rule, regulation, standard, or other provision having the force and effect of law relating to rates, routes, or services of any air carrier." Congress thus chose to eliminate "a confusing system of dual regulation," because "it is important that only one standard of regulation be provided for airlines operating under the authority of the CAB." S. Rep. No. 631 at 98. See also H.R. Rep. No. 1211, 95th Cong., 2d Sess. 15-16 (1978).

The Deregulation Act was followed by the Civil Aeronautics Board Sunset Act of 1984, Pub. L. No. 98-443, 98 Stat. 1703 (1984), which transferred the powers and duties of the CAB to the Department of Transportation ("DOT"). This Act preserved section 105(a) (1) of the Deregulation Act, with its express statement of federal preemption, and the accompanying House Report explained that preemption was of particular importance in the area of consumer protection:

In addition to protecting consumers, federal regulation insures a uniform system of regulation and preempts regulation by the states. If there was no Federal regulation, the states might begin to regulate these areas, and the regulations could vary from state to state. This would be confusing and burdensome to airline passengers, as well as to the airlines.

H.R. Rep. No. 793, 98th Cong., 2d Sess. 4 (1984). The Report further explained that Congress had chosen to consolidate "CAB's consumer protection and unfair competitive practice authorities" in DOT in order to avoid the conflict or confusion that might result "[i]f two agencies shared authority." Id. at 6.

Following enactment of the Sunset Act DOT has continued and expanded upon CAB's regulations in the area of consumer protection. DOT's regulations comprehensively address such matters as advertising; competitive, promotional, and deceptive practices; sales; and notice of terms of contract of carriage. See generally 14 C.F.R. §§ 201, 221, 254, 380, 399 (1990). With specific reference to the advertising of air fares, DOT has issued orders providing, for example, that the international departure tax, customs and immigration fees, and surcharges for security services may be identified separately from the base fare. DOT Orders 85-12-68 and 89-4-25. 4 R. Ex. 5 ("R" refers to the multi-volume record on appeal); Appellees Br. at A33-35 (No. 89-1142 5th Cir.). Moreover, in publishing notice of proposed regulations, DOT has affirmed that section 105(a)(1) of the Deregulation Act protects carriers against potentially conflicting regulation of air fare advertising by the 50 states and dictates "that there be one industry-wide price advertisement standard." 54 Fed. Reg. 31052, 31054 (1989).

2. The events leading to this litigation. In September, 1987, the National Association of Attorneys General ("NAAG") circulated proposed Air Travel Industry Enforcement Guidelines, including proposed uniform state rules governing air fare advertising, to carriers, DOT, and the Federal Trade Commission ("FTC") for comment. The Guidelines provided, inter alia, "that any fuel, tax or other surcharge to air fare must be included in the total advertised price of the fare." Texas Pet. App. 3a ("Texas Pet." refers to the petition in No. 90-221).

The FTC and DOT both strongly opposed adoption of the Guidelines. The FTC pointed out that the Guidelines, "especially the advertising provisions, could have the unintended consequence of substantially inhibiting effective price competition," that they "might result in inconsistent federal and state regulation," and that they "ignore[] the important question of federal preemption." 4 R. Ex. 2. DOT also objected to the Guidelines on their merits and commented further that they "appear to be preempted by the Federal Aviation Act (49 U.S.C. § 1301 et seq.), or [DOT] rules or would unduly burden interstate commerce" 4 R. Ex. 8 at 1. Notwithstanding this federal opposition, NAAG adopted the Guidelines in December, 1987. Texas Pet. App. 3a.

In February, 1988, the attorneys general of Texas and six other states circulated a memorandum announcing that they intended to "bring airline advertisements into compliance with standards delineated in the [NAAG] guidelines for fare advertising." 2 R. Ex. H, Attachment A. DOT responded by stating that "we have specifically permitted the type of advertising to which the Attorneys General object" and repeating that "the federal government has preempted this aspect of state price advertising regulation." 4 R. Ex. 9 at 1. Undeterred, the attorneys general of Texas and four other states sent letters in November, 1988, to respondents Trans World Airlines, Inc. ("TWA"), Continental Airlines, Inc. ("Continental Airlines"), and Eastern Airlines, Inc. ("Eastern Airlines").

tal”), and British Airways PLC (“British Air”), “notifying them that some of their advertisements violated the NAAG guidelines and these states’ false advertising and deceptive practices laws . . . [and] charg[ing] that the airlines had attempted to make their fares appear lower than those of their competitors by prominently advertising the ticket price, while less prominently disclosing taxes, surcharges and fees.” Texas Pet. App. 3a. “The letter threatened prosecution.” Id.

3. Litigation in the district court. Faced with this threat, TWA, Continental, and British Air brought suit against the Attorney General of Texas in the United States District Court for the Western District of Texas, seeking to enjoin him from enforcing the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act against their fare advertising. They moved for a temporary restraining order (“TRO”) and the court held a hearing on the motion. On the day of the hearing, the attorneys general of 33 states (not including Texas) filed a motion requesting an order denying a TRO or, in the alternative, a postponement of the hearing. Id. at 29a. The Attorney General of Kansas participated in the hearing, explaining that he appeared on behalf of all of the attorneys general who had filed that motion. Id. at 30a.

Following the hearing, the district court determined that the plaintiffs had established a likelihood of success on the merits and also had satisfied the other requirements for preliminary injunctive relief. Id. at 41a-42a. Accordingly, the court “issued the preliminary injunction prohibiting the Attorney General of Texas from initiating any enforcement action to regulate the [plaintiffs’] advertising of fares.” Id. at 30a. The Attorney General of Kansas then filed a motion to clarify the injunctive order. Id. The court granted the motion, making explicit that the preliminary injunction “does not apply to any Attorney General of any state, commonwealth, territory, or the District of Columbia, other than Jim Mattox, Attorney General of Texas, nor does that order apply to any law other than the laws of the State of Texas." Id. at 31a.

Subsequently, TWA, Continental, and British Air moved to broaden the preliminary injunction to cover the 33 attorneys general who had intervened de facto as defendants in order to oppose the request for a TRO, and ten additional respondent airlines here moved for leave to intervene as plaintiffs. The district court granted both motions on April 26, 1989. Id. at 44a-59a. On May 26, 1989, the court permitted the remaining respondent airline here, Pan American World Airways, Inc., also to intervene as a plaintiff. Id. at 60a-61a.

All 34 attorneys general appealed from issuance of the preliminary injunction.

4. The Fifth Circuit's opinion. The court of appeals affirmed, agreeing that "state laws pertaining to deceptive advertising have been expressly preempted by federal law when applied to fare advertising by interstate and international airlines." Id. at 13a.

The court began by noting that section 105(a)(1) of the Deregulation Act preempts all state laws "relating to rates, routes, or services," and that this Court has held that a state law "relates to" a subject, as that term is used in a preemption statute, if it "has a connection with or reference to" the subject. Id. at 15a (citing Shaw v. Delta Air Lines, Inc., 463 U.S. 85, 96-98 (1983)). The court further noted that the Seventh Circuit earlier had concluded that "[p]ricing advertising surely 'relates to' price" and that other courts had reached similar conclusions concerning the reach of section 105(a)(1). Id. at 15a-18a (citing Illinois Corporate Travel, Inc. v. American Airlines, Inc., 889 F.2d 751, 754 (7th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 110 S. Ct. 1948 (1990); New England Legal Found. v. Massachusetts Port Auth., 883 F.2d 157 (1st Cir. 1989); O'Carroll v. American Airlines, Inc., 863

F.2d 11 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 109 S. Ct. 3158 (1989); Anderson v. USAir, Inc., 818 F.2d 49 (D.C. Cir. 1987); and Hingson v. Pacific Southwest Airlines, 743 F.2d 1408 (9th Cir. 1984)).

The court then reviewed the legislative history of section 105(a)(1) and determined that it “demonstrates the intent of Congress to expressly preempt state regulation of airline fare advertising, leaving no right of action that arises under state law only.” Id. at 21a. In addition, “[s]ubsequent legislation has confirmed the intent of Congress to preempt state regulation of airline fare advertising.” Id. at 22a. The court concluded:

Given the history of congressional concern and the inclusion of specific preemption language in the Deregulation Act, we agree with the Seventh Circuit in Illinois Corporate Travel that airline fare advertising “relates to” rates within the meaning of § 1305(a)(1). Although the state laws against deceptive advertising are not aimed specifically at airlines, and clearly do not attempt to set rates, the conclusion is inescapable that such laws do “relate to” rates when applied to airline fare advertising. As the Supreme Court noted in Shaw, a law relates to a particular subject “if it has a connection with or reference to” that subject. It cannot be gainsaid that enforcement of a state law regulating fare advertising by airlines has a connection with or reference to rates within the meaning of § 1305(a)(1). Therefore, such state action is expressly preempted by § 1305(a)(1).

Id. at 23a (citation omitted). Consequently, “the airlines have demonstrated a substantial likelihood of success on their claim for a permanent injunction.” Id. at 25a. The court determined that the other requirements for issuance of a preliminary injunction also had been satisfied. Id. at 25a-27a.

The court further held that “the thirty-three attorneys general became de facto intervenors when the Attorney General of Kansas filed the motion, sought relief and participated in the TRO hearing on their behalf . . . [and thus] waived any objection to the jurisdiction of the court over their persons as representatives of their respective states." Id. at 34a.

5. Entry of final judgment. After the Fifth Circuit affirmed the award of preliminary relief, the district court issued a permanent injunction and entered final judgment on June 1, 1990. Id. at 62a-67a. The petitioners' appeal from that judgment currently is pending in the Fifth Circuit. See Mattox v. Trans World Airlines, Inc., No. 90-8387 (5th Cir.).

ARGUMENT

1. Issues pertaining to the propriety of preliminary injunctive relief are now moot. This case arises from the issuance of a preliminary injunction. Following affirmance by the Fifth Circuit, the district court issued a permanent injunction and entered final judgment. The order granting preliminary relief now has merged into the order granting permanent relief, and questions pertaining to the propriety of the earlier order have become moot. See Smith v. Illinois Bell Tel. Co., 270 U.S. 587, 588-89 (1926); Shaffer v. Carter, 252 U.S. 27, 44 (1920).

Petitioners argue that the Fifth Circuit, in ruling on their pending appeal from the final judgment, will simply adhere to its holding in this case respecting the preemptive effect of section 105(a)(1) of the Deregulation Act. See Texas Pet. 6-7 n.1; 33 Pet. 11 n.5 ("33 Pet." refers to the petition in No. 90-232). This overlooks the fact that the issues now before the Fifth Circuit are subtly different from those decided in this case: "whether the preliminary injunction should have issued depended on the balance of factors listed in Canal Authority [of Florida v. Callaway], 489 F.2d 567 (5th Cir. 1974)], while [the propriety of permanent relief] depends on a final resolution of the merits." University of Texas v.

Camenisch, 451 U.S. 390, 393 (1981). We nevertheless agree that the Fifth Circuit can be expected to adhere to its prior holding with respect to preemption: petitioners have introduced no evidence and developed no argument to suggest that the holding should not extend to the award of permanent relief.

This does not mean, however, that mootness should be disregarded on grounds of expediency, merely because the questions petitioners wish to present may soon become ripe for consideration by this Court in any event. The doctrine of mootness has a practical value in cases precisely such as this. Petitioners could have sought review of the permanent injunction in this Court by filing a petition for a writ of certiorari before judgment. See 28 U.S.C. § 1254(1). They have chosen, instead, to take a second bite from the apple in the Fifth Circuit. They are entitled to do so, but they should not expect this Court to permit them to conduct parallel litigation in this Court and the Fifth Circuit. “[T]he only question before [this Court]—the correctness of the decision to grant a preliminary injunction—is moot,” Camenisch, 451 U.S. at 394, and the very purpose of the doctrine of mootness in this context is to prevent parallel litigation over preliminary and permanent injunctive relief.

2. Section 105(a)(1) of the Deregulation Act preempts state regulation of air fare advertising. The Fifth Circuit’s holding with respect to preemption is correct. There is no reason for this Court to grant review.

a. Section 105(a)(1) preempts all state laws “relating to rates, routes, or services of any air carrier.” The phrase “relating to,” as used in federal preemption statutes, must be given a “broad common-sense meaning.” Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Dedeaux, 481 U.S. 41, 47 (1987). A state law “relates to” a subject “if it has a connection with or reference to” that subject. Shaw v. Delta Air Lines, Inc., 463 U.S. 85, 96-97 (1983). See also, e.g.,

Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Massachusetts, 471 U.S. 724, 739 (1985); Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Florida, Inc. v. Department of Banking and Finance, 791 F.2d 1501, 1504-05 (11th Cir. 1986); Pacor, Inc. v. Higgins, 743 F.2d 984, 994 (3d Cir. 1984). As the Seventh Circuit also has concluded, state laws regulating the advertising of air fares plainly have a connection with or reference to rates. Illinois Corporate Travel, Inc. v. American Airlines, Inc., 889 F.2d 751, 754 (7th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 110 S. Ct. 1948 (1990). Such state laws, therefore, are preempted by section 105(a)(1).

The legislative history confirms this conclusion. Prior to 1978, the CAB and the states had shared responsibility over consumer protection. See Nader, 426 U.S. at 300-01. The enactment during that year of section 105(a)(1) was intended, among other things, to eliminate this "confusing system of dual regulation," S. Rep. No. 631 at 98, and to "prevent conflicts and inconsistent regulations." H.R. Rep. No. 1211 at 16. "Congress obviously did not intend to leave a vacuum to be filled by the Balkanizing forces of state and local regulation." New England Legal Found. v. Massachusetts Port Auth., 833 F.2d 157, 173 (1st Cir. 1989).

When Congress later transferred the CAB's powers over consumer protection to DOT, it explained that "[i]n addition to protecting consumers, federal regulation insures a uniform system of regulation and preempts regulation by the states," thereby leaving air carriers free from "confusing and burdensome" state regulation. H.R. Rep. No. 793 at 4. This view of a subsequent Congress concerning the meaning of a previously enacted statute has "significant weight," Seatrain Shipbuilding Corp. v. Shell Oil Co., 444 U.S. 572, 596 (1980), especially where, as here, "Congress is not merely expressing an opinion on a matter which may come before a court but is acting on what it understands its own prior acts to mean."

Mount Sinai Hosp. v. Weinberger, 517 F.2d 329, 343 (5th Cir. 1975).

Moreover, DOT repeatedly has taken the position that its authority over consumer protection preempts state laws of the kind that petitioners are seeking to enforce. Indeed, to the extent that those state laws are fairly represented by the NAAG Guidelines, they are directly contrary to the position that DOT has announced concerning the separate identification of taxes, fees, and surcharges in fare advertisements. See pp. 3-4, supra. For all these reasons, the Fifth Circuit correctly concluded that section 105(a)(1) preempts state efforts at regulating air fare advertising.

b. The decision below does not conflict with the decisions either of this Court or of the other courts of appeals. Although petitioners attempt to suggest otherwise, the decision below obviously is consistent with Nader. In that case, this Court held that the CAB's authority to regulate consumer protection under section 411(a) of the Federal Aviation Act was not exclusive in the absence of any provision in that Act expressly preempting state law. The decision in this case turns on section 105(a)(1) of the Deregulation Act, which was enacted two years after the decision in Nader and does expressly preempt state law. The Deregulation Act, with its express preemption of state law, fundamentally redirected and entirely overhauled the regulatory scheme under which Nader had been decided. This case and Nader thus involve different issues arising under different statutes with different regulatory objectives.

The decision below also is consistent with both Alaska v. Department of Transp., 868 F.2d 441 (D.C. Cir. 1989), and Air Transport Ass'n v. Public Util. Comm'n, 833 F.2d 200 (9th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 487 U.S. 1236 (1988), the two federal appellate decisions on which petitioners rely in asserting a conflict. The decision in Alaska did not involve section 105(a)(1) and, indeed, had nothing whatsoever to do with preemption; the question there concerned only the procedural validity of certain administrative orders. Preemption was at issue in Air Transport; the court held that a state regulation forbidding surreptitious eavesdropping on telephone conversations was unrelated to airline rates, routes, or services and therefore was not preempted by section 105(a)(1). That regulation obviously was far removed from the regulation of air fare advertising at issue in this case.

More recently, the Ninth Circuit has held that a passenger may sue an air carrier under state law for damages resulting from overbooking, reasoning that section 105(a)(1) does not "encompass all state laws that affect airline services, however tangentially." West v. Northwest Airlines, Inc., No. 89-35820, slip op. (9th Cir. Sept. 11, 1990). But the Ninth Circuit has not decided a case involving state regulation of air fare advertising, nor has it said anything to indicate that it disagrees with the decisions of the Fifth and Seventh Circuits on this issue.

Absent a conflict, this case does not warrant plenary review. The Attorney General of Texas argues that "[t]he effect of the injunction is to prohibit the filing of any additional lawsuits by any state, whether in state or federal court." Texas Pet. 7 n.2. At one point the non-Texas petitioners enlarge upon this argument, claiming that the scope of the injunction was overbroad. 33 Pet. 17-19. But the argument, which was not made below, clearly is mistaken and quite possibly is not even seriously intended. As the non-Texas petitioners elsewhere correctly point out, "[s]ixteen states are not covered by the injunction . . . [and] [n]umerous airlines are not parties to th[is] litigation and are not covered by the injunction." 33 Pet. 13. There is, thus, ample opportunity for further consideration of this question of preemption in the lower courts.

There is little reason to fear, however, that the lower courts will be overburdened by a groundswell of litigation involving this question. Petitioners have identified only five such cases pending in federal and state trial courts, and three of those have now been dismissed. See Tex. Pet. App. 65a-66a. For the present, consideration of the question presented here may be safely left to the lower courts. "Wise adjudication has its own time for ripening." Maryland v. Baltimore Radio Show, Inc., 338 U.S. 912, 918 (1950) (opinion of Frankfurter, J., respecting denial of certiorari).

3. The district court properly exercised jurisdiction over the non-Texas petitioners. The attorneys general of 33 states entered this litigation voluntarily and of their own accord. They were under no compulsion to do so:

the plaintiffs filed suit only against the Attorney General of Texas. Although they sought a TRO against the defendant and "any person in active concert or participation with him," the only relief prayed was from enforcement actions "under the laws of the state of Texas." The complaint and motion for an injunction did not seek to enjoin the enforcement of any laws but those of Texas.

Texas Pet. 33a. Nonetheless, the non-Texas petitioners, behaving like named parties, rushed into court filing a motion, seeking relief, and participating in argument. This is not a case, like Burnham v. Superior Court of California, 110 S. Ct. 2105 (1990), involving an absent defendant; the non-Texas petitioners were present and active in court.

Although the non-Texas petitioners did not expressly waive objections to personal jurisdiction, neither did they expressly assert such objections. They claim now that they "contested" jurisdiction, but that is wrong; they simply sought relief "without admitting that this Court has personal jurisdiction over them." Texas Pet. App. 29a. They were precluded from contesting jurisdiction, for they were "ask[ing] the court to act on [their] behalf in some substantive way." 33 Pet. 27.

In these circumstances, there was ample factual basis for the Fifth Circuit's determination that the non-Texas petitioners intervened de facto and thus subjected themselves to the personal jurisdiction of the district court. See, e.g., In re Grand Jury Proceedings, 654 F.2d 268, 271 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, 424 U.S. 1098 (1981); Martindell v. International Tel. & Tel. Corp., 594 F.2d 291, 294 (2d Cir. 1979). This essentially factual question is sui generis and does not warrant further review.

The non-Texas petitioners' related claim, that there was no subject-matter jurisdiction or justiciable case or controversy, is frivolous. There was of course subject-matter jurisdiction, for respondents' claim was based on a federal statute. See 28 U.S.C. § 1331.

There also was a case or controversy. It is undisputed that respondents' advertising violates the NAAG Guidelines, which the attorneys general treat as expressive of state law. In this context, the non-Texas petitioners' precipitate entry into the case, with their demand that they be left free to "enforce[] . . . their state law in their state court," Texas Pet. App. 30a, adequately demonstrated the existence of a "real, substantial controversy between parties having adverse legal interests, a dispute definite and concrete, not hypothetical or abstract." Railway Mail Ass'n v. Corsi, 326 U.S. 88, 93 (1945). Respondents were not "without some reason in fearing prosecution," Babbitt v. United Farm Workers Nat'l Union, 442 U.S. 289, 302 (1979), and did not have to "await the consummation of threatened injury to obtain preventive relief." Pennsylvania v. West Virginia, 262 U.S. 553, 593 (1923).

CONCLUSION

The petitions for writs of certiorari should be denied.
